LANGUAGE AND AREA TRAINING (EXTERNAL)*

External language and area training may be pursued at most universities in this country and at many universities overseas. No programs or courses are identical although the subject may be the same. Final selection of institutions and determination of programs are made by headquarters on a basis of stated objectives of the training. It is expected that most needs for external language and area training will be met by courses and programs described in the catalog, or other programs announced later through headquarters. When required training is not obtainable through any of these programs, and is not available through other scheduled courses in academic institutions, unscheduled programs will be developed.

Requests for training should be submitted not less than one month, and preferably three or more months in advance.

Components of [REDACTED] may be requested to accept personnel of the organization in any of its colleges or specialized courses. Headquarters has obtained specified quotas from [REDACTED] senior colleges at which it is considered desirable to have representatives of this organization included in each annual and semi-annual session.

The mission of these schools is to train senior officers of the military and naval services and certain other [REDACTED] agencies to exercise joint, high-level command and staff functions and perform strategic planning duties in their respective departments. Consequently, the organization's Career Service Board selects and recommends to the chief of the organization, for his nomination, those career officers whose qualifications are parallel in age, training, and experience to the military officers attending each course. Representatives are those whose present or prospective duties require a knowledge of current military doctrine and who are likely to be collaborating with the military and naval services in future years. At the same time they must have had sufficient experience within the organization to be able to contribute a knowledge of its functions and procedures to those phases of the military courses in which the problems of intelligence are implicit. Current requirements are included in headquarters' announcements when applications are requested prior to the dates for selecting candidates each spring.

The organization has had quota allotments for the principal service courses in intelligence; other intelligence courses are available in such subjects as Prisoner of War Interrogation, Order of Battle, and Photo Interpretation. Individuals may also be sent to specialized courses conducted by the military and naval services.

Headquarters maintains current catalogs of courses and schedules published by the military and naval services. These catalogs list several hundred courses from basic training to post-graduate study in professional fields.

ADVANCED MANAGEMENT COURSES

Businessmen have attended universities for assistance in studying the problems inherent in the growth of huge corporations. The responsibilities undertaken by both business and government executives in our generation far exceed the expectations of fifty years ago. One result has been the inauguration of intensive university courses and seminars for personnel in senior executive positions. The objective of these courses is to make the corporation executive a better man for his job and to prepare him for the assumption of greater responsibility. Headquarters considers some of these courses to be effective in preparing qualified personnel for future advancement in this organization. The courses are conducted from six to twelve weeks and are held from one to four times a year.

Requests for information concerning the Advanced Management courses and requirements for enrollment may be directed to headquarters.
